

Absolute black honed granite countertop

Authored by: Maurizio Bertoli [mailto:mail@mbstone.com]

Saved From: <https://marblecleaning.org/knowledgebase/article.php?id=1550>

I have a honed granite countertop in my kitchen. We have been loving it now for 3 years and just adore how it looks. When it was first installed the installer had "sealed" it with something that (I guess) protects it from water marks. They suggested I reseal it every year or so, but neglected to tell me what it was. (In fact I went back to them to buy some about 1.5 years later and they put some in a soda can for me to use, but would not give me the name. Very curious, I know. I applied it (by rubbing it on with a towel, waiting about 1/2 an hour and then rubbing it back off. very simple.) Anyway, I love the counter, but I am noticing that the cup rings are starting to stubbornly stay put when I try to wipe them off and I think it is time to reseal it again. Could you recommend a product I could apply. Thanks for your help. Great site! Thanks. Jenn

Dear Jenn:

The only type of "sealer" that makes any sense with hone-finished black granite is a good quality stone color enhancer like MB-6.

However, before switching brand it is paramount that the old product is totally removed "not an easy feat. Or else, you have to find out that particular brand and get hold of it.

May I ask you now to please read and e-sign our Statement of Purpose at: <http://www.marblecleaning.org/purpose.htm>
?

Ciao and good luck,

Maurizio Bertoli

www.marblecleaning.org "The Only Consumers' Portal to the Stone Industry Establishment!