

Do you recommend marble in bathroom floors?

Authored by: Maurizio Bertoli [mailto:mail@mbstone.com]

Saved From: <https://marblecleaning.org/knowledgebase/article.php?id=400>

My bathroom has 4'x5' non-tub area with a pedestal sink and a toilet. I'm debating between marble and non-slip porcelain tile in that area. Maintenance & Slippery floors are the criteria. Could you please share your opinion? Thanks!

Dear Gasu:

Marble is not slippery " unless it's wet.

However, marble caters to a particular type of customers: people who loves it but realize and accept the fact that's more delicate to maintain than other manmade materials.

If practicality is your utmost concern, then porcelain tile is "your man".
Some of them even look like marble!

Ciao and good luck,

Maurizio Bertoli