I have travertine tiles in the bathroom and have been advised by the shop that sold them to me that I should clean with a mild solution of washing up liquid as this is non-abrasive for limestone etc. However, despite regular cleaning and having a good fan in the bathroom there are small bits of mould already appearing around small areas of the grouting. What product can I use to clean this mould?

Dear Antonia:

I have been advised by the shop that sold them to me that I should clean with a mild solution of washing up liquid as this is non-abrasive for limestone etc.

WOW!!!... It sure sounds like they know what they're talking about!!!... J

To the best of my knowledge, MB-9 is the only product of its kind on the market that will work at removing mildew stains without affecting the stone.
